Dr. Clark developed the Parent-Child Early Relational Assessment (PCERA), an instrument for assessing the quality of affect and behaviour in parent-child interactions used in over 300 research and clinical programs internationally. Dr. Clark was a major contributor to the Diagnostic Classification of Mental Health and Developmental Disorders of Infancy and Early Childhood (DC: 0-3). She is also the developer of the Mother-Infant Therapy Group Approach for Postpartum Depression (M-ITG), has written numerous articles on screening, evaluation and treatment of postpartum depression, maternal employment, and assessment of strengths and areas of concern in early parent-child relationships.

Dr. Anderson is a Licensed Clinical Psychologist who received her Ph.D. from DePaul University and completed her clinical psychology internship at University of Wisconsin Hospitals, Department of Psychiatry. Dr. Anderson works with infants, toddlers and preschoolers and their families and caregivers providing preventative and early intervention services in child care and family support programs. She also collaborates with Dr. Roseanne Clark providing training and consultation to clinicians and researchers nationally and internationally in the use of the Parent-Child Early Relational

Assessment (PCERA), an instrument for assessing the quality of affect and behaviour in parent-child interactions.

In the Scandinavian countries there have been held several training seminars where a number of professionals have received education and training in using the method, some by the Swedish psychologist Pia Risholm-Mothander, others by the Finnish psychologist Sari Björklund Ahlvist.
